ABSTRACT

An integrated circuit including a buried layer of determined conductivity type in a plane substantially parallel to the plane of a main circuit surface, in which the median portion of this buried layer is filled with a metal-type material.